INDUSTRIAL BREAKERS AHEAD!

By Rabbi Ferdinand M. Isserman

We are deeply concerned over the suggestion of a local news article that when the agreement between the union and the employers in one of the needle trades expires on December 31st, a strike will be in the offing. We know nothing of the agreement. We do not know whether it should be continued or discontinued. We do not know whether it should be amended or remain unaltered. But we do know that industrial peace is better than industrial warfare, both for employers and employees, and we do express the hope that both groups will do all in their power to maintain peace—a peace based on justice.

ON CANDIDATES FOR THE BOARD OF EDUCATION

More important than the task of selecting city fathers on New Year's Day is the task of selecting suitable men and women to sit on the Board of Education. The Board of Education is the guardian of the intellectual development of thousands of children. Its work is sacred and vital. Membership on it should not be sought as a rung in the ladder to political success. What it needs is not men and women who have political ambitions or who are good vote-getters! The Board of Education merits a personnel of character and culture, which shall ensure the best possible educational policies. It is to be deplored that men and women of that type too often do not relish the frenzy and boisterousness inevitable in political campaigns and will not allow their names to be presented to the voters. But only by inducing such men and women to stand for office will the City of Toronto ever get the type of membership on its Board of Education that its children merit.

MR MARSHAL RESENTS THE EXPLOITATION OF THE JEWISH NAME IN POLITICS

At its twenty-first annual meeting, the American Jewish Committee released a communication of Mr. Louis Marshall, its chairman, to a group who requested his advice on the advisability of forming a "Hebrew Democratic Club." Mr. Marshall's reply is a classic, and should be preserved in the archives of American Jewry. Part of his letter follows:

"We Jews especially owe a duty to ourselves to occupy a dignified attitude toward public questions—not to cheapen our name, not to permit it to be dragged through the mud of ward politics. It should have to us a sacred connotation and should not be placed in danger of being soiled and contaminated. Moreover, why should we Jews give rise to any inference that we have a special ax to grind, that our politics have a selfish tinge, and why should we, who in the past suffered because of our religion, now create even a suspicion that we are entering into politics under the banner of separatism? We are opposed to the Ku-Klux-Klan, we are opposed to the A.P.A. and to the Know Nothings, but we are imitating them when we call ourselves Hebrew Democrats and Hebrew Republicans, and Hebrew

MR. SAMUEL "NIGGER'S" LECTURES

What was the most important event in the communal life of Toronto Jewry during the past week?

As far as we are aware not a single new campaign was launched. Not a single crisis was reported. Not a single new organization was formed to fill a void in the time of the organizers.

Some five hundred Jews went to hear Mr. Samuel Charney (known under the pseudonym of "Nigger") discourse on various phases of Jewish art and literature.

The Jewish people in the course of their distinctive existence have created a considerable literature expressive of their peculiar thinking and perceiving. Manifestations of a people's cultural energy are usually of great interest to persons concerned with the life and doings of that people.

Now Mr. Charney ("Nigger") is generally recognized as being the best informed and most profound student and critic of Jewish literature we have to-day. The secrets of Jewish creativeness are open to him as perhaps to no other literary contemporary. A fluid and lucid lecturer, "Nigger" is able to guide his audience through the maze of currents and cross-currents which play under the surface of Jewish group life.

Mr. "Nigger" delivered four lectures to limited audiences during the week-end. A comparative handful of enthusiasts were present to take advantage of the privilege of hearing him.

And on the surface of our communal life there was scarcely a ripple. The presence of a brilliant expounder of Jewish cultural activity meant nothing to the great indifferent.

H. D. NUMBERG

Another classical figure in Jewish literature passed away this week. H. D. Numberg, famous novelist and short story writer in Hebrew and Yiddish, died in Russia after a lingering illness, at a comparatively young age.

Numberg belonged to the school of Jewish writers who envisaged the Jewish world as a complete and natural entity. He drew his nourishment from the sources of Jewish life. He was a product of the Jewish environment and wrote for his environment. This type of Jewish writer is now fast disappearing. The newer school of writers feel that they belong to the world at large. Though they may write in Hebrew or in Yiddish they use the language merely as a medium for registering universal notes. Some of the latter at times achieve great heights. But their products have not the significance of a national literature.

The Third-Class Concert

By WINIFRED HOLTBY

The liner had crossed the Equator. Day after day she drawled lazily through motionless blue seas, encircled by the brave sweeping flight of the albatrosses. It was very hot, and on the third-class deck the passengers gathered in listless groups, playing cards, sewing and endeavouring idly to amuse the ubiquitous children.

During the first week of the voyage they had sorted themselves with almost uncanny certitude into clear-cut sections. The fine young wives, all affirming that this was the first time that they had travelled third-class, and that it was quite good fun, and that in these days of the new poor it was no use pretending to be opulent; the young men adventuring to make their fortunes in the new platinum mines or on citrus farms; the older couples, uprooting themselves too late in life for comfort from a country which had no longer room for them; the convivial commercial travellers, the troupe of Guitar Girls, bound for South African Theatres, Limited, the amorphous Irish families, the prim school-master, there they were, all keeping themselves to themselves with a spontaneous social adjustment peculiar to passengers on a long voyage. And there also was the isolated, dark, despised, curious company of sixty Jews from Eastern Europe, travelling under the protection of their small, dapper, voluble interpreter.

Some said that they were bound for Portuguese East Africa. Others that they were coming to replace the Indians expatriated from Natal. Others declared that they had no valid papers and that they would be turned back at Caretown. Yet others said that it was a shame that the country should grow over-run with pestilential Jews who had hardly two tickies to rub together; and reminded each other of the celebrated cartoon which showed South Africa as a cow, with a Dutchman pulling her tail, an Englishman pulling her horns and a Jew milking her.

The Jews said nothing. They kept very close together on the hot congested deck. The women, with shawls over their heads, watched their docile, precocious children, calling them away from the more boisterous Anglo-Saxons. The men in shirt-sleeves, with scarlet handkerchiefs round their necks, smoked, sat and played cards with a queer sombre vivacity.

They slept, a steward said, right down near the hold, below the rabbit warren of the third-class cabins, and the bathrooms which stank of Condy's Fluid, and the bare white dining saloon, which looked, said one of the young wives, for all the world like a public lavatory. They wore the same clothes day after day, and read no books, attempted no sports, but only waited, as though their minds were heavy with memories of pogroms in Poland and famine in Latvia. Like the Dutch Voortrekkers, they sought a Promised Land, terrifying and desirable, and with the courage of patient humility they set forth into the unknown.

Among them all, a chartered libertine, authoritative, indefatigable and amused, went Captain Christopher Langley. He had been elected as sports president by the third-class passengers, and he flung himself into the labour of organizing potato races, quoits tournaments, fancy-dress balls and sing-songs, with that disinterested devotion to administrative detail which characterizes the British colonial, civil or military servant. He said that he had been "axed" from the Indian army, and was joining his brother in a motor business in Durban. It was only at the end of the voyage that most people realized that the delicate, dark-haired, little woman with the three naughty children, was his wife. He himself appeared always unruffled, confident and neat, treating with good-humoured superiority even the unaccommodating Jews. To the other passengers he spoke of them as the "Squngs." The name spread.

Captain Langley was arranging a concert. After much coaxing he had discovered a lady who could sing, only a trifle out of tune, "A Perfect Day," and "Yearning," and "God Send You Back to Me." Mr. O'Malley, prompted by his fat, jolly wife, could recite "The Crockery Cart" and "Pat O'Flannigan's Ball." Two "Comics," a dancer of Irish jigs, the Guitar Girls, a young farmer with a decent baritone who knew no songs but was quite willing to learn, and a little girl who played the violin, made up his company. He took them down to the hot, beer-scented lounge, and rehearsed with them indefatigably, thumping on the tuneless piano, repeating choruses, chaffing, praising, questioning.

The hot evenings died into the windless nights. Captain Langley's preparations went forward slowly. The interpreter came to him one evening and asked whether his men might borrow for an hour the guitar belonging to one of the Guitar Girls. The Captain hesitated, but the girl, with giggling sportsmanship, surrendered her instrument. The interpreter withdrew and the rehearsal continued.

CHRISTIAN JEWS?

A group of so-called Christian-Jews held recently a conference in Montreal. They formulated new tactics by which they hope to win Jewish souls for the Church. What a terrible lot these Christian-Jews are! We like to speak of them as "meshumodim." This Hebrew word expresses best what we think of them. It is strange that in this hour of human progress sincere Christians who are devout religionists, should permit themselves to be misled by apostate Jews. The Jewish-Christian is neither good Jew nor good Christian. The Jewish-Christian is in the "missionary business" for the sake of gain. There is no doubt about it! President Roosevelt once said: "I have no patience with those who would convert Jews or Catholics. More likely than not where they succeed at all they succeed only in destroying something. They take something real away, and give nothing in return, leaving the victim bankrupt." To Dr. Peltz who spoke at the Montreal Missionary Conference, we say in the words of Jesus: "Woe unto you scribes and Pharisees, hypocrites: for ye compass sea and land to make one proselyte: and when he is become so, ye make him twofold more a son of hell than yourselves." (Matthew 23: 15).

We often marvel at the time and labour and means expended by Christians on their futile efforts of trying to convert Jews to Christianity. It seems to us that Christians perhaps could accomplish what they expensively seek by easier means—by the power of example, by being Christians! How many Christians live the lives which Jesus, the Jew, bade them live; doing good and hating evil; abstaining from doing wrong to any of their fellow-kind, no matter what race or creed, or colour; loving all men as they love themselves? We suggest that the missionaries Christianize the Christians.

We ask the leaders of "Churchianity," "From what to what would you convert the Jews?" From a home life where there is piety and regard for religious and parental authority, from a life which possesses sanctity—regard for the marital tie; from a religious philosophy which teaches regard for the duties due to the poor, sick and needy (that is indeed superior to the lives of many Christians) TO WHAT?

Is it not absurd? We who gave monotheism, the Bible, the Prophets, Jesus, the Apostles, to the world—we should need spiritual guidance from Christians!

We suggest that our readers present copies of "My Return to Judaism," by S. Freuders, to Christians, who are deluded by so-called Christian-Jews. Freuder, in his book, reveals the truth about Christian missions to the Jews.

FEDERATION CAMPAIGN

The Federation of Jewish Philanthropies of Montreal has set aside the week of November 27th for its campaign. To Montreal Jews we say, "Give all you can! It is better to give than to receive!" Do not try to "escape" Federation. The Prophet Isaiah pointed out long ago the acceptable day to the Lord in the following words:

"Is it not to deal thy bread to the hungry
And that thou bring the poor that are cast out to thy house?
When thou seest the naked that thou cover him,
And that thou hide not thyself from thine own flesh?"

PRESTON

The Galt-Preston Yavne Club met at the home of Miss Sara Gordon, Duke Street, Sunday, November 13. Addresses were given by J. Gordon and Miss P. Enoushevsky. We have grown literally afraid to be poor. We dispise any one who elects to be poor in order to simplify and save his inner life. We have lost the power of even imagining what the ancient idealization of poverty could have meant: the liberation from material attachments, the unbribed soul, the manlier indifference, the paying our way by what we are or do, and not by what we have, the right to fling away our life at any moment irresponsibly—the more athletic trim; in short, the moral fighting shape. It is certain that the prevalent fear of poverty among the educated classes is the worst moral disease from which our civilization suffers."—William James.

Just as surely as members of a family take turns being sick or meeting other calamity so do the different elements in American Jewry manage to create diversion for each other by acting up in public. So if the fumes of the Steuer incident have vanished into air and Steuer's charges that the Jewish Distribution Committee misappropriated funds have gone off the front pages it has all been succeeded by advance notices of the trial in Cleveland, November 28, of orthodox members of the Jewish Center versus Rabbi Solomon Goldman. Since the testimony to be presented in court is to establish what orthodoxy is and since the whole performance is likely to be one of the most beguiling staged within Jewry, a little of the history is called for.

The fight began two and a half years ago. It is between a committee of orthodox members of Congregation Ansche Emeth Beth Tephilah, which built the Cleveland Jewish Center, and Rabbi Solomon Goldman, rabbi of the Center, and its board of directors. This congregation is fifty years old and is said to have spent a million dollars on the Center. The complaining committee which filed suit against Rabbi Goldman charges that he has violated the constitution of the congregation, which says that the congregation is to remain orthodox as long as ten members insist on the orthodox ritual. This committee wants the Center to be orthodox. Rabbi Goldman and the board of directors declare that the ritual and all are already in accordance with orthodox Judaism.

Both sides have retained non-Jewish lawyers of Cleveland, and these men have been taking depositions by leaders of orthodoxy and conservatism in New York in an effort to decide what is orthodoxy. Thirty-three questions are put to the witnesses called and among those whose testimony has been taken are Rabbi Leo Jung, Rabbi M. S. Margolies, Rabbi Eliezer Silver, Rabbi J. L. Selzer, of the Union of Orthodox Rabbis; Gedaliah Bublick, editor of the "Jewish Daily News"; Dr. B. Drachman and Rabbi Herbert S. Goldstein, of the Union of Orthodox Congregations.

Keen regret and deep chagrin, high disapproval and strong disgust are being expressed both in orthodox and conservative quarters (to say nothing of the reform element of Jewry) that this Jewish religious controversy should be dragged before a secular tribunal. The executive committee of the Rabbinical Assembly of the Jewish Theological Seminary and the United Synagogue of America said in a resolution signed by Rabbi Max Drob and S. Herbert Goldstein, presidents respectively of the two organizations, that the act of the Cleveland men is foreign to the spirit of Judaism and if they had cause to complain they should have brought their trouble to the Rabbinical Assembly and the United Synagogue for adjudication.

However, this trial may be one or several blessings in disguise. A lot more may come out in the wash done in public than if the case were brought before what is considered the proper authorities. Among the charges against Rabbi Goldman are that he denied the Sinaitic origin of the Torah and the Decalogue, that he allowed men and women to sit together, that he stopped saying grace at public banquets, that he abolished benediction at services in the synagogue and that he instituted the custom when he officiated of kissing the brides after marriage ceremonies.

To some people all this sounds very nice. They are conservative, perhaps. To others it sounds just simply awful. They are orthodox, maybe. But you cannot always tell what people will be shocked by. Some go along through life in the serene belief that they are at least conservative. Others think them plain Goyim. Rabbi Goldman, alleged to be always willing to kiss the bride, and his board of directors say that they are in full agreement with traditional Judaism. The other Jewish gentlemen say it cannot be so. If the trial does anything else it will clear up in the minds of confused people a few dark doubts as to what they really believe, how they should be classified and with what affiliated. f.f.c.

Third-Class Concert

Upstairs a few first-class passengers, who found it too hot for dancing, and were tired of playing bridge, lay on the boat deck watching the stars sway backwards and forwards behind the long mast of the ship. Suddenly, out of the darkness a tenor voice, pure, melancholy and exquisite, rose into the quiet air.

The song was in a foreign tongue, but the short, lilting verses ended in a refrain which cried with an anguish of beauty and pain, 'Soula! Soula!" Then three lines of reiterated melody, then the swinging rhythm of the climax and a final call, "Obee!" After eight such verses the chorus was at last caught up by a deep-voiced choir singing in harmony. It was repeated; it rose in wild protest, drooped and died again on one long-drawn, sighing note which swung out across the water and melted into the encircling night. "O-bee!"

"Jove, what was that?" they asked. But only one rose from his chair and ran unostentatiously down the companion, along a labyrinth of passages, through an unlocked door, up more steps, and out on to the third deck. It was an exploit not encouraged by the ship's authorities, but the young man was a journalist and skilled in finding access to forbidden places.

Standing in the shadow he saw the packed ranks of the third-class passengers gathered about an open space on the deck. On the edge of the circle of lamplight crouched a small, uncouth man playing a guitar. His head with its straggling, grey beard dipped over the instrument, as he plucked with clever, careless fingers, stray incoherent notes and dropped them into the silence. Beside him stood a slight boy in shirt sleeves who had just been singing. His head was thrown back, his cheeks flushed bright pink, his lips parted. He began another song.

This had a racier tune. It seemed to be of a humourous quality, for the dark-faced Lithuanians and Poles and Latvians broke into spasmodic bursts of shaking laughter, and stamped on the floor and clapped their hands, until the infection of the song spread to the outer ring of the Gentiles, and they too began to rock their heads and beat on the deck and clap voraciously for more.

More followed. The man with the guitar fumbled easily until he seemed to find a little monotonous tune, a repetition of two notes, then three, then two again, fiercely accented. "Ta-ra, ta-ra, la-la-la, la-la-la, ta-ra!" The music wove a rippling circle of magic over the listening crowd.

Then two dark, stolid-looking youths separated themselves from the others and stepped forward into the ring of lamp-light. With arms locked they swayed to the music, throwing their legs from side to side, and humming, "Ta-ra, ta-ra, la-la-la, la-la-la, ta-ra!" Their eyes were heavy with brooding contentment; they breathed deeply; the sweat ran down their flushed faces; they swung their legs in clumsy, rhythmical abandon.

The music quickened. Two girls moved forward, one shyly, one boldly, yet with an assured, predestined gravity. They thrust their arms through those of the young men and together the four swayed in a solemn line. There was no gaiety in the dance; their movements might have been part of a religious ritual, the song an incantation. Closer and closer together swung the two girls at the end of the line. With a shout from the onlookers, they caught hold of each other's arms and suddenly locked the line into a circle. The magic ring was complete. Round and round it spun, as wilder and wilder the music rose, and louder and louder sang the Jewish chorus.

Isolated, incomprehensible, withdrawn, bound together in this invulnerable circle, the young men and maidens danced under the swinging lamp. As David might have danced before the Ark of the Covenant, with the triumph[illegible]

[illegible] stamped their feet, [illegible] their dark hair a backwards and forwards, they danced before the wondering Gentiles, on their way to the Promised Land.

Poor, ill-treated, despised Israel, with that close interlocked circle of their blood, their history, their religion, they made a blasphemy of suffering, and an exultation of defeat. It was the superiority of Christians which appeared then to be isolated and desultory. For all their confident voices, the pink jumpers of their pretty wives, the sophisticated boasting of the young men, they were a haphazard, estranged, heterogeneous gathering of wanderers at best. They had no secret communion which suddenly drew them into a tight, whirling circle, no power of corporate song like this that rose and fell over the listening sea. They were shut out. They were scattered.

[illegible]ance, [illegible] long [illegible] years [illegible] which [illegible] locked [illegible] some- [illegible] some- [illegible]

"I'll [illegible] tell the world," [illegible]breath.

Captain [illegible], emerging [illegible] after [illegible] arduous performance [illegible] the last wild [illegible] circle below it [illegible] encouraging the dancers into the [illegible] of their applauding friends. He recognized the journalist, and nudged him.

"Come to see the valuable performing [illegible] bit?"

The younger man [illegible] on him in great [illegible]. "Say, you run this [illegible] [illegible] right here, don't you?"

"I do."

"Then why to goodness don't you give a show and invite [illegible] benighted creatures from the first-class to come and [illegible]? We're fed up to the back teeth with our own stuff. You can give us something worth seeing."

Fresh from his [illegible], amused and gratified, Captain [illegible] sucked meditatively through his [illegible] teeth, smiled and said he'd see what he could do.

On the boat deck, in the library, in the bar, the music room, and on the boat deck, the first-class passengers listened to the tales spread by the young journalist with the American accent, who provided such rare sport at the Third-Class Concert.

"I tell you, it's the genuine article. No faked ballet stuff imported via Paris. No watered-down Diaghelev nonsense. Real peasant ritual dancing, hot from the villages in Poland and Esthonia and Latvia and God alone knows where."

The intellectuals thronged round him. They spoke of the Chauve Souris and Gogol, and Russian Jews as they appear upon the platform of the Coliseum. The young journalist scored a triumph. It was not only that he could provide a new sensation for their jaded appetites. He felt the power and beauty of the Jewish chorus to be in some way a vindication of his inmost self, of the fears which he had stifled as a boy, of innumerable humiliations when his black hair and long nose had called to the memory of acquaintances the resemblance of his profile to that of a race which was not 100 per cent. American. He wanted to see the Jews impress these lordly English.

The night of the Third-Class Concert arrived. The iron gates in the railing which separated first-class sheep from third-class goats swung open. The steward's carried across chairs and chairs and more chairs, and the first-class passengers streamed through. They brought with them a whiff of perfume, the satisfying scent of good cigars a glimmer of jewels and a flutter of tulle veils. They took their places in the front rows of the great semi-circle before the cleared space of deck. The single light hung above the piano and tarpaulins covered the hatches upon which the singers were to stand.

The pretty girls in the pink and blue and white jumpers handed round neat printed programmes. By the piano, smiling, unflustered, indefatigable stood Captain Christopher Langley, gratified that his labours were about to be rewarded.

On the programme the journalist read: piano solo, "Selection [illegible] Travatore," Mr. Spicer; song, "The Perfect Day," Mrs. Langstaffe; recitation, "The Crookery Cart," Mr. O'Malley; selections on guitar, The Four Guitar Girls, and so on, to God Save the King." The Spungs had not even been invited.

DR. SOSKIN HONOURED

Dr. Samuel Soskin, 142 Nassau Street, Toronto, was recently honoured with editorial mention in the Journal of the American Medical Association, the official organ of the medical profession of the United States. A piece of original research work by Dr. Soskin was cited as being the latest advance in an important field of metabolism, and the possible significance of the work was pointed out. The original paper was published in the American Journal of Physiology and deals in a technical manner with the origin of the sugar which is found in the blood, a subject which has acquired a special importance since the discovery of the "insulin" treatment for diabetes. Dr. Soskin for the past two years has been carrying on medical research work in the department of physiology at the University of Toronto. Dr. Soskin also instructs third year medical students.

PURITY FLOUR

PRAISED BY ALL

On November 2nd and 3rd a wide range of home baking, in which Purity Flour was used, was offered for sale in several booths at the Hadassah Exporition in the Coliseum at Toronto. It is gratifying to know that Mrs. Greenberg (as expressed in her letter in the adjoining column) was so well pleased with Purity Flour, as were also the following ladies:

Mrs. Gotlieb, 264 Queen St. East, Toronto, who baked cookies
Mrs. Wilter, 252 McCaul Street, Toronto
Mrs. Brownstein, 85 Bellevue Avenue, Toronto
Mrs. Tafelsman, 252 Simcoe Street, Toronto, who baked noodles
Mrs. Gushim, 461 Euclid Avenue, Toronto
Mrs. Papish, 17 Kensington Avenue, Toronto
Mrs. Burkowitch, 111 Borden St., Toronto, who baked chalah

In addition a score of ladies in other Hadassah organizations throughout the city baked sponge cake, cheese cake, coffee cake, butter cake, French pastry, Sabbath loaf and strudel, and all were enthusiastic in their praises of Purity Flour. They recommend it for all their baking.

The Family Welfare Bureau of Federation has begun its distribution of warm underwear and clothing. Mrs. Charles Draimin, president of the organization, has personally distributed to date 300 garments among twenty-three families, comprising seventy-five individuals, and twelve new girls' dresses made by the Council of Jewish Women sewing circle. Numerous families received new shoes and rubbers. The above figures do not represent the entire needs of the dependent and semi-dependent families. Every day calls come in for underwear, clothes, boots, etc. These calls are properly investigated and if actual need is found the requests are granted. A special second-hand clothes department is also conducted, where all donations of old clothing are received, classified and properly distributed among the poor. The present supply of old clothes is rather low. Those who can donate articles, send them in, or telephone Ad. 6071, and a representative will call for the bundle. Men's and boy's suits, women's and girls' coats, and infants' clothes, if still in fairly good condition, can be utilized.

Announcing that they are going to make it impossible for a Jewish student to attend Hungarian universities, groups of Christian Magyar students have attacked and driven away every Jewish student who attempted to attend lectures in the Budapest Institute of Technology and the Debrecsen University. Though stoned, many Jewish students succeeded in remaining in other universities. The educational

WEDDING

Davis—Vise

At the home of Mr. and Mrs. B. Sadowski, 19 Harper Avenue, Moore Park, the wedding took place Saturday, November 5, of Miss Etta Vise and Harold I. Davis, of Tacoma, Washington, son of Mrs. D. Davis, of Erie, Pa. Rabbi Isserman officiated. The bride wore a period gown of ivory moire, wedding veil with coronet of pearls and rhinestones, and satin slippers. Her bridal bouquet was of butterfly roses and lilies-of-the-valley. The wedding march from Lohengrin was played and Mrs. I. Vise sang "O Promise Me." The ceremony took place beneath a large white wedding bell trimmed with smilax. The house was artistically decorated with pink chrysanthemums and ferns and large palms. The bride travelled in a brown satin crepe dress and sand coat trimmed with sable, with hat and shoes to harmonize. After a honeymoon spent in Chicago, New Orleans, Los Angeles, San Francisco, Mexico and other points west, they will live in Tacoma, Washington. Guests from a distance were Mrs. D. Davis, of Erie, Pa., mother of the groom, Dr. and Mrs. A. Hyman, of New York; B. Chon, of Chicago; and Mr. and Mrs. I. Vise, of Chicago.

Each day for the past few years, a party of Toronto housewives, generally about one hundred in number, has been conducted on a tour of inspection through this laundry. Our employes are, therefore, "on their toes" all the time, with the result that the work done is just a little better than that of any other Toronto laundry. "Family wash" is the only work we do and we are specialists in that line. If your household laundry is a problem to you, we feel sure that we can provide the solution. Phone to-day.

One of the outstanding features of the International Convention and Exhibition in Paris, France, was the Realistic Permanent Wave, which received three prizes out of six for the excellency of workmanship.

At this momentous gathering of the peers of the profession—in the very capital of beauty—Canada's voice was again heard through the medium of her distinguished specialist, W. T. Pember.

No better evidence can be produced that the Realistic is superior to all others than that the International Exhibition in Paris should award it such a large proportion of the prizes.

We are the headquarters in Canada for the Realistic Permanent Wave. Here will be found the most up-to-date methods and a number of new inventions direct from Paris.

Northern Ontario, now open for settlement at fifty cents per acre, contains millions of acres of the finest agricultural land in the world. Its resources in lumber, minerals, water, power, fish, game and scenery are immense. The land calls for men to cultivate it, and in return will give health, comfort and prosperity.

What settlers say of the soil, climate, farming and forest life, is told in a most attractive booklet issued under the direction of the Honourable John S. Martin, Minister of Agriculture for Ontario. Full instructions in regards to acquiring a title to these rich agricultural lands are also given.

In loving memory of the late Rabbi Fishel Brown, who died November 24th 1926.

A wonderful father, man and aid,
One who was better, God never made,
A wonderful worker, so loyal and true,
One in a million, that father was you,
Just in your judgment, always right,
Honest and liberal, ever upright;
Loved by his friends, and all whom he knew,
Our wonderful husband and father was you.

Ever remembered by his wife and children.
